

Australian Institute of Company Directors

Governance advice and support for community organisations

What is the Australian Institute of Company Directors?

The Australian Institute of Company Directors is an organisation which provides a wealth of governance information and support to those involved in, or interested in, Company Directorship. Even though their primary audience is directors of companies, most of their resources are equally as relevant for our small community groups and can provide excellent guidance for a high standard of sound practice across all areas of governance for any organisation.

Australian Institute of Company Directors online resources

If you are interested in exploring good governance practice in more depth, the Australian Institute of Company Director's website provides an excellent starting point.

The website www.companydirectors.com.au includes:

- A comprehensive Director Resource Centre – this includes sections such as Governance and director issues; Director Q&A; Publications; and a Governance Analysis Tool
- Listings of a broad range of courses that are available, including courses for the Board, as well as courses for individual Directors
- Information about their various events, such as upcoming conferences and programs

Their Not-for-Profit Resource Centre (found under the Director Resource Centre) is designed specifically to provide support to non-profit organisations, and includes information about roles and performance; governance, reporting, and risk management; 'Hot Topics' and 'Must Reads'.

Access to Australian Institute of Company Directors resources

Most of the information and resources on the website can be accessed by anyone. However, the Australian Institute of Company Directors also has a Membership structure that offers additional benefits to its Members.
